Bach, the Capellmeister

The life and career of Johann Sebastian Bach’s found him in many different roles in many different locations, all confined to a limited geographical space.

During the course of his life Bach worked in Lüneburg, Weimar, Arnstadt, Mühlhausen, Weimar, Köthen, and Leipzig. His roles ranged from a paid chorister in Lüneburg to the director of the Music Society of Leipzig. It was during his time in Köthen (1717-1723) that he assumed the position of Capellmeister (orchestra director) in the service of Prince Leopold von Anhalt-Köthen.

The 20th anniversary Bach at New Years focuses on music composed during his time in Köthen.
